MAY APPEAL TO HIGH COURT FOR PHILIP HARTMAN

Authorities Do Not Believe, However, Further Action Will Be Taken.

An appeal to the Supreme Court is the only ray of hope that lingers for Philip A. Hartman, self-confessed and convicted slayer of Trooper Francis A. Haley, who on Monday afternoon was sentenced to pay with his life the penalty for his crime, by Judge Donald P. McPherson.

Confined to his cell in the Adams county jail, Hartman, who several months ago was reconciled to the fate of death in the electric chair, and later, visualizing freedom and escape from the extreme penalty, connived to, but was frustrated in his attempt to saw his way to freedom, awaits now the next step, if any will be taken, by his friends, relatives or Attorney George Benner which may mean life imprisonment.

Attorney George Benner stated this morning that he was not in a position to state whether a further appeal would be taken in Hartman's case. "I am waiting consultation with friends and relatives of Hartman, relative to a further appeal," said Mr. Benner.

May Not Appeal

It was rumored in authoritative circles that an appeal to the Supreme Court, the only alternative remaining, would not be taken in Hartman's behalf. In substantiating the rumor, court house officials declared that insufficient evidence, upon which Judge McPherson rendered his decision to refuse a new trial, foreshadowed any possible attempt to secure an affirmative decision from the higher court, and Hartman is expected, according to local officials, to pay with his life for killing Trooper Francis Haley on the afternoon of October 14.

"I've made by peace with God, and I am ready," was the statement of Hartman, shortly after his trial, when he was convicted of first degree murder by a jury in the local courts. At that time he appeared reconciled to the fate of death in the electric chair and his calm and emotional attitude indicated that he saw no light through which he might escape the death penalty.

Several months' incarceration in the Adams county jail, with freedom of the corridor granted him by Sheriff Shealer, instilled in Hartman desire to escape and he planned with and inveigled Roy Diamond, Annville, boyhood companion of his, to assist him.

Diamond, now serving a sentence for conspiracy to assist in breaking jail, sought to smuggle steel hacksaws into Hartman with which the condemned man intended to saw his way to freedom. Hartman was frustrated in this attempt. The saws found their way into Sheriff Shealer's hands, who immediately turned the case over to the state police.

Trooper Frutchey, conducting a three-day investigation of the case, arrested Roy Diamond, who later confessed his complicity in the matter and was given a prison sentence.

Hartman's chief interest then centered in Attorney Benner's appeal for a new trial, which was refused Monday afternoon.

The condemned man now awaits the fixing of the date for his execution by Governor Pinchot. An appeal to the Supreme Court may be taken, but this was considered improbable by local authorities.

SUMMER SCHOOL
COLLEGE OPENS

Although only 135 students registered on Monday, the opening day of the summer school at Gettysburg College, there is reason to believe that before the term gets fully under way registration will be in the neighborhood of 200. There were more than 160 students enrolled last year. Dr. Charles F. Sanders, Broadway, is director of the summer school, which offers practically all of the courses given during the regular school year. Several additional teachers have been added to the staff of the summer school this summer. The term of the session is seven weeks.

COUNTIAN FACES
BURGLARY COUNT

Joseph Spearendorff, Littlestown, Accused of Entering James Home, Saturday Night.

TRACKED BY WOMAN

Joseph Spearendorff, near Littlestown, whom Mrs. Theodore James trailed as the suspected robber of her home, was released under $1,500 fixed by Judge D. P. McPherson in court Monday afternoon, following a preliminary hearing of the charge of burglary against him before Justice J. L. Hill.

At the preliminary hearing, when a prima facie case was established against Spearendorff, Justice Hill announced that under the charge of burglary he could not set bail, and that Judge McPherson would be the only person who could take the bond. Spearendorff is charged with having broken into the James home between 8 and 10 o'clock, Saturday night, while members of the family were in Littlestown. Tire tread marks of his automobile were traced from the James home to Spearendorff's by Mrs. James, who entered the latter's house under the pretext of buying eggs. She saw a jar of meat which she had put up on the table at Spearendorff's, and returned home, telling her findings to her husband who came to Gettysburg and secured Sheriff John C. Shealer and Deputy Sheriff Blaine Bixler, who arrested Spearendorff on Sunday afternoon.

New Trial Refused

Among the other items of business transacted Monday afternoon was the refusal of the court to grant Charles Fissel, charged with forgery, a new trial, ordering him to appear for sentence at 10 o'clock, June 29, when court will next be held.

Hearing on a petition for the sale of a Maxwell touring car, seized as the property of John Small, an alleged bootlegger, was set for July 20, when a hearing also will be held on the forfeiture and condemnation of 40 gallons of grain alcohol seized as the property of Ernest Delva, Harrisburg, an alleged bootlegger.

A petition for the sale of real estate of the late T. Wallace Zeigler, York street, was approved by the court.

It is also requested by Mr. Reynolds that the names of all children who will start school for the first time in the fall be sent in to him, along with their street addresses, so that it may be determined how many to prepare for in September.

Mr. Reynolds will be at the high school building for the next few weeks where he can be reached by persons desiring specific information on school entrance problems.

JOHN HUMES IS GIVEN SENTENCE
BY LOCAL JURIST

Member Of Self-Styled "Hill Gang" Sent To Eastern Penitentiary.

John Humes, member of the self-styled, "Hill gang robbers," whose petty larcenies in the upper end of the county were cut short a month ago by state police with the arrest of seven members of the alleged band, was sentenced to the Eastern Penitentiary on two charges of larceny to which he pleaded guilty by Judge D. P. McPherson Monday afternoon.

On the first count, Humes, father of one of the boys in the "Hill gang," was sentenced to serve not less than one and one-half years nor more than 3 years in the Eastern Penitentiary, while on the second count he was sentenced to not less than 2 years nor more than 4 years in the Philadelphia institution. Both terms are to begin at once. In addition the prison sentences, Humes was ordered to pay a fine of $1 on each count and the costs of the prosecution of the two charges.

Humes' son, Samuel, 16 years old, was sentenced to Glen Mills School for an indefinite term, which is not expected to expire until he has reached 21. The boy's mother is dead, and since his father will spend some time in the penitentiary the court decided that Glen Mills would be the best place for the youth.

Must Go To S. S.

Regular attendance at Sunday School and church services is one of the provisions of the probationary terms meted out to the other five members of the "Hill gang." The five young men were placed on probation for two years, during which time they must report every two weeks to Miss Margaret McMillan, county probation officer, pay the costs of prosecution and restore the value of goods to the owners from whom they were stolen.

District Attorney John P. Butt was allowed to enter a nolle props on a second charge of larceny against Samuel Humes, John Humes, William Snyder and Robert Snyder, upon agreement that they pay the costs of the prosecutions.

HIGH CHAMPIONS
GUEST OF LIONS

Central Pennsylvania Scholastic League Pennant Winners Dined at Sauble's Inn, Monday.

Like champions they played baseball this spring and won the pennant in the Central Pennsylvania Scholastic league and like champions they partook of a sumptuous dinner at Sauble's Inn, Taneytown, Monday evening, and emerged victorious.

That summarizes the crowning achievements of the Gettysburg High School baseball team, to whose members new honors and tributes were given when they were special guests of the Gettysburg Lions Club at the club's weekly luncheon, Monday evening. Members of the pennant-winning team turned out en masse for the treat at Sauble's Inn, Jacob Weikert, captain-elect, leaving a sick bed so as not to miss the "big time."

After everyone had done justice to a fried chicken dinner with all the "trimmings," J. Donald Swope, president of the club, adjourned the meeting to Taneytown's baseball diamond grand stand, for speeches by Dr. Reed B. Tietrick, Carlisle, and C. William (Continued on Second Page)

The tour was under the general supervision of A. C. Weile, president of the association. Twenty-eight cars were in line. Pictures of the group were taken at the High Water Mark. 25 IMMIGRANTS
ARE KILLED ON WAY 'OLD HOME'

Train Is Wrecked In Thunderstorm; Victims Were Foreigners on Way Home.

(By Associated Press.)

Hackettstown, New Jersey, June 16.—Twenty-five persons are known to have lost their lives in the wreck of a Lackawanna special train two miles west of here early today. Fifty-two injured are in hospitals and many of them are in critical conditions.

Hundreds of rescue workers arrived by daylight and two relief trains received the injured. Scalds and burns caused the most serious injuries. Steam was issuing from the wreckage three hours after the crash. Bundled in blankets bodies of the victims were laid side by side on the grass.

Passengers in the last two cars which did not leave the rails escaped injury.

The train was filled with immigrants who had become prosperous in the middle west and were returning for a visit to their native lands accompanied by children and grand-children.

Back To Old Country

The cars were decorated with banners reading: "See the old country again." The train had been re-routed at Portland, Pennsylvania, over the old Lackawanna main line that was replaced by a cut-off twelve years ago. The tragedy occurred in what is known as the Rock Port sag where the rails dip into a hollow and then rise.

Those who reached the wreck first could see the body of Fred Loomis, the engineer, his hand on the throttle together with his firemen.

On the plowed-up road bed beneath the locomotive lay the twisted body of a little girl in a flimsy night-gown.

The accident occurred in a terrific thunder-storm. The exact cause has not yet been ascertained. Early reports said that a bolt of lightning had struck the rails immediately in front of the locomotive.

Her direct examination was concluded in ten minutes with a further story of the Shepherd's change of attitude toward her when they learned she was engaged to "Billy" and that Shepherd had told her he had studied about typhoid germs.

CHARGE 23 WITH
DEFACING 44TH
MONUMENT HERE

Wheels Of Federal Government Move Against Alleged Despoilers of Tablet.

Twenty-three defendants in six states are named in informations laid before United States Commissioner Robert E. Wible, here, all charged with violating a section of a United States statute in having "unlawfully and willfully mutilated, defaced and injured a certain bronze tablet plate," part of the 44th New York monument on Little Round Top.

Three of the defendants reside in the middle district of Pennsylvania, and, before their cases are presented to the Federal court grand jury at Scranton, they will be summoned to appear before Commissioner Wible for preliminary hearings, which in this instance are expected to be only formal.

The other twenty defendants reside out of the jurisdiction of the middle district court, and the informations laid before Commissioner Wible will be sent directly to the United States district attorney, for this district and presented to the Federal grand jury when it next convenes. If true bills are returned, one of two courses of action is open to the court. Bench warrants may be sent to the United States marshals of the districts in which the alleged offenders reside, informing them to appear in the middle district court for trial, or the court may set a fine for each to pay, sending notices of the amount to each of the defendants.

Acts Committed June 1

All of the informations are dated around June 1, when the alleged acts were committed on tablets which are part of the 44th New York monument on Little Round Top. Most of the defendants named in the informations wrote their full names and addresses on the tablets in pencil, or scratched them on the bronze with sharp pointed instruments.

Witnesses to the alleged acts of vandalism, which constitute misdemeanors in the eyes of the Federal government, are James B. Aumen, assistant superintendent of the national park; William H. Tipton and Ernest Strickhouse, all of Gettysburg.

Hearing Date Not Fixed

trict has not yet been set, according to Commissioner Wible. "These hearings will only be formalities," the United States commissioner explained, "prima facie cases having already been made out against the trio. However, in order to have everything legal and above board, we will hold the hearings at some future date."

In case the grand jury returns true bills on the informations and the defendants wish to enter pleas of guilty, they may do so, according to Commissioner Wible, but the informations must first be passed upon by a Federal grand jury. Federal court sits at Scranton in October and at Harrisburg in December, and the informations may be presented to the grand jury at either place.

Upon conviction or upon entering a plea of guilty the defendants are liable to a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $1,000 and imprisonment of not less than 15 days nor more than 1 year. Either or both of these sentences may be meted out at the discretion of the court.

Duncan, Philadelphia, formerly of Gettysburg.

Fresh tributes to the prowess of the members of the Maroon and White baseball team were paid by both speakers, who also gave ample credit to Coach Walter D. Reynolds, who, they said, in twelve years has brought Gettysburg High School athletic teams from comparative obscurity to positions where they are "known to thousands and respected as worthy opponents by teams they meet."

It was a great night for the team members as well as for the Lions whose guests they were. The team joined in the group singing, and on one occasion the members were called upon to arise to lead a song, and did so cheerfully.

Summer Cottage Colony Razed

MINER, A GIRL, DEATH REVEALS

Dug Coal For Six Years in Father's Pit at Side of Husky Brothers and Mother.

Pittsburgh, June 16.—Announcement that a girl had dug coal for six years in a pit near Bridgeville came with the death of Anna Smoley, 23 years old, of Preston, in the Mercy Hospital Monday.

The girl was crushed under a fall of slate on Saturday. She had been working in a wagon commercial mine, operated by her father, Thomas Smoley, according to statements made. Swinging a heavy pick and handling a shovel with as much vigor as a man, the girl earned a living underground from the day she was 17. An hour after she was caught by the fall of slate her father entered the pit to begin work and discovered her plight. An hour elapsed before she could be extricated.

According to reports, the girl's mother also dug coal in Smoley's mine. Both were men's clothes, and it is said that outside of the family none knew the "young miner" was not a man.

County detectives said Monday they were investigating the employment of the young woman in her father's pit. The employment of women in other than clerical positions, about were equal to theirs. She was of violation of the law. The information obtained by the detectives has been turned over to the Department of Mines.

The young woman worked with her two husky brothers and her earnings the mines, the detectives said, was in medium build. The family lives on Thom's road, near Bridgeville.

FIRST STORY OF GIRL MURDERER TOLD IN COURT

Court Reporter's Story Received From Dorothy Perkins Admitted As Evidence.

(By Associated Press.)

New York, June 16.—Dorothy Perkins' story of the shooting of Thomas Templeton as she told it to a court reporter four hours after Templeton, her suitor, was killed in her home on St. Valentine day, including an admission that she fired the pistol with which Templeton is said to have been killed, was introduced as evidence in her trial today. R. J. McLoughlin, court reporter, testified that Dorothy soon after the police arrived to investigate the tragedy said:

"My father had called me several foul names. I said to Tommy, 'Tommy, you're the cause of this.' Then I pulled back the top of the gun, but I didn't aim it. It went off and I heard someone say, 'Tommy got it.'"

The defense objected to introduction of the statement but was overruled.

Captain William A. Jones, after a court attendant had slipped on the coat worn on the night of the shooting by Rudolph Perkins, Dorothy's father, showed how the gun must have been held, and said that Perkins could not have held it in his right hand.

Both state and defense rested their case shortly before one o'clock and the session was adjourned.

3 KILLED IN CAVE-IN

PETE DE PAOLO IS AUTO WINNER

Check of Official Tape on Annual Flag Day Race at Altoona Changes First Results.

Altoona, June 16.—Following the protest entered Saturday by Frank Elliot over the award of the 250-mile speedway classic here to Tommy Milton, officials of the contest board of the American Automobile Association checked up the official tape of the race with the result that the entire standing as given out Saturday was changed.

Under Sunday's revision Peter De Paolo, who won the Indianapolis race on Memorial Day and who finished second Saturday, is declared the winner, with Elliot in second place and Milton third. It was discovered that in the close finish of Saturday's race the scores had become mixed and had failed to give Elliot credit for a lap he made. The time remains unchanged.

Officials of the automobile association said that Milton had been credited with a lap Saturday that should have been given Elliot.

This Year's Champ

Saturday's victory probably gives De Paolo the championship for this year and his decision to enter the Grand Prix at Vernier, Belgium, early in July will not therefore rob him of the honor. Up to Saturday's race De Paolo had a total of 1500 points for the championship, with Milton in second place with 890 points. Had De Paolo finished second it is understood he would have been slightly under the total number of points required by the championship. Not being able to return from Belgium in time to participate in the next meeting which is to be held at Laurel, Maryland, July 11, he would have lost his standing.

Starter Fred Wagner, in explaining Sunday night how the mix up occurred relative to the winner of the automobile race Saturday, said that four separate sets of records kept track of the whirling cars and that in the closing laps the number one set became confused and announced Milton had won. Later when Elliott made his protest the other scorers were consulted and the mistake became evident. Number one scorers then checked their figures and discovered their error which made all scores agree that De Paolo was first, Elliott second and Milton third.

WEIKERT HEADS HIGH BALL TEAM

Catcher of Championship Club This Year Succeeds Heiges As Pilot For Season of 1926.

Jacob Weikert, Steinwehr avenue, who followed his illustrious brother, Wilbur Weikert, as varsity catcher for the Gettysburg High School team, was unanimously chosen captain of the 1926 baseball squad by his teammates before the dinner at Sauble's Inn, Monday evening, when the members of this year's team were guests of the Lions Club.

The doughty little catcher, who caught "Big Jim" Tennant's slants and hooks for the past two seasons, is looked upon as the ideal successor of Alvin Heiges, retiring captain, who graduated two weeks ago. Weikert comes from fighting stock from a baseball standpoint, his brother, "Wib", having been the receiver for high school for several years, and a catcher at college this year.

Weikert will be a senior next year. He started playing baseball in his freshman year at high school, but did not get into the varsity squad until his second year. Not only is he a staunch and reliable catcher, but his hitting has been on a par with others on the squad. For several days he has been confined to bed by an attack of quinsy, but he could not resist accompanying his teammates to Sauble's on Monday evening.

"I predict that Gettysburg will turn out a pennant winning team again next season," the new captain said. "We lost by graduation this year Gardner, McKenrick and Heiges, all good men, but we have as excellent prospects for their berths, Colestock, Russell Gilbert and others."

Coach Walter D. Reynolds was well pleased with the team's choice of Weikert as captain for next year. He echoed what the captain-elect said about next year's prospects, saying that Colestock will probably be given the first sack to cover, filling the vacancy caused by the graduation of Heiges, and that Gilbert would be a formidable candidate for an infield berth. Gilbert's work with the scrubs this season has been frequently commented upon by players and coach.

FIVE NATIONS PAY $70,000,000

Britain Leads in Meeting War-time Obligations With More Than $68,000,000.

Washington, June 16.—Payments on account of war debts, totaling approximately $70,000,000, were made Monday to the treasury by Great Britain, Finland, Hungary, Lithuania and Poland.

The British payment of $68,310,000 was the fifth semi-annual one under the terms of the debt settlement approved February 28, 1923. The British, as is their option, paid in American government obligations, $67,843,700 face amount of 2 1/2 percent treasury certificates of indebtedness of series T, 1925, due September 15, 1925, the accrued interest being $466,424.06 and the cash adjustment $75.94. The obligations of the United States accepted in connection with the British payment have been canceled and retired.

The Finnish payment, totaling $133,650, and made in cash, was the fifth semi-annual installment on the funded indebtedness of that nation. Hungary paid $14,905.69 as the third semi-annual payment of interest on her indebtedness, except that part to be funded. The remainder of the interest will be funded in accordance with the option given the government of Hungary in the debt settlement agreement.

The second semi-annual payment of interest, except that part to be funded, and the first annual installment of principal on the funded indebtedness of the Republic of Lithuania due the United States under the terms of the debt settlement approved by the act of December 22, 1924, amounted to $75,225, of which $45,225 was for interest and $30,000 was for principal. The remainder of the interest will be funded in accordance with the option given the government of Lithuania in the debt agreement. The payment was made in cash.

The first payment on account of the funded indebtedness of the Republic of Poland due the United States under the terms of the debt settlement approved by the act of December 22, 1924, including $135,465.68 received January 13, 1925, on account of the June 15 installment, amounted to $500,000 which was made in cash. The remainder due will be funded in accordance with the option given Poland in the debt settlement agreement.

and Mrs. David Rudisill and son, Fred, Hanover, spent Saturday with friends in Littlestown.

Leo Clingan, son of Mrs. S. B. Aumen, Lombard street, who has been suffering from diphtheria for the past week and who has been quite ill, is slowly improving.

Mrs. Leonard U. Collins and son, William, and Pauline Boyd, near Gettysburg, were guests Friday of the former's mother, Mrs. Lucinda Wolfe, North Queen street.

Miss Mildred Cochran, New York City, is visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Evan Appller, and family, Park avenue.

GETTING THE BABY TO EAT

Not often have I praise for guile
Or ought that savors of deceit,
But at that trickery I smile.

By which the babe is made to eat.
I chuckle as I hear her say:

"Now, Peter Rabbit, we will play!
Come, show your dad how Peter takes
The carrot pie his mother makes."

Her little mouth she opens wide
And in the spoon of carrot drops,
The self-same artifice is tried.

With those detested spinach tops;
'Tis wisdom swindling innocence,
But when I see the game commence
I put my honor on the shelf
And start to swindle her myself.

These three-year-olds, I've come to know,
Enjoy the things they shouldn't eat.

If they could have their way they'd stow
Their stomachs full of sickly sweet;

So age beside the table board
Must play the trickster and the fraud
And cover thick with pretty lies
The vegetables babes despise.

Let moralists proclaim that truth
Alone deserves a word of praise,
They have forgotten the ways of youth.

And all the tricks a mother plays;
They've overlooked the pretty lies
Which every parent must devise,
And every artful, clever feat.
Required to get a babe to eat.

CHAPTER I

There Are Herolisms All Round Us

Mr. Hungerton, her father, really was the most tactless person upon earth—a stuffy, feathery, untidy stickatoo of a man, perfectly good-natured, but absolutely centered upon his own silly self. If anything could have driven me from Gladys, it would have been the thought of such a father-in-law. I am convinced that he really believed in his heart that I came round to The Chestnuts three days a week for the pleasure of his company, and very especially to hear his views upon bimetalism, a subject upon which he was by way of being an authority.

For an hour or more that evening I listened to his monotonous chirrup about bad money driving out good, the token value of silver, the depreciation of the rupee, and the true standards of exchange.

"Suppose," he cried with feeble violence, "that all the debts in the world were called up simultaneously, and immediate payment insisted upon—what under our present conditions would happen then?"

I gave the self-evident answer that I should be a ruined man, upon which he jumped from his chair, reproved me for my habitual levity, which made it impossible for him to discuss any reasonable subject in my presence, and bounced off out of the room to dress for a Masonic meeting.

At last I was alone with Gladys, and the moment of Fate had come! All that evening I had felt like the soldier who awaits the signal which will send him on a forlorn hope; hope of victory and fear of repulse alternating in his mind.

She sat with that proud, delicate profile of hers outlined against the red curtain. How beautiful she was! And yet how aloof! We had been friends, quite good friends; but never could I get beyond the same comradeship which I might have established with one of my fellow reporters upon the Gazette—perfectly frank, perfectly kindly, and perfectly unsexual. My instincts are all against a woman being too frank and at her ease with me. It is no compliment to a man. Where the real sex feeling begins, timidity and distrust are its companions, heritage from old wicked days when love and violence went often hand in hand.

The head bent, the averted eye, the faltering voice, the winching figure—these, and not the unshrinking gaze and frank reply, are the true signals of passion. Even in my short life I had learned as much as that—or had inherited it in that race memory which we call instinct.

Gladys was full of every womanly quality. Some judged her to be cold and hard; but such a thought was treason. That delicately bronzed skin, almost oriental in its coloring, that raven hair, the large liquid eyes, the full but exquisite lips—all the stigmata of passion were there. But I was sadly conscious that up to now I had never found the secret of drawing it forth. However, come what might, I should have done with suspense and bring matters to a head to-night. She could but refuse me, and better be a repulsed lover than an accepted brother.

So far my thoughts had carried me, and I was about to break the long and uneasy silence, when two critical dark eyes looked round at me, and the proud head was haken in smiling reproof. "I have presentiment that you are going to propose, Ned. I do wish you wouldn't; for things are so much nicer as they are."

I drew my chair a little nearer. Now, how did you know that I was going to propose? I asked in genuine wonder.

"Don't women always know? Do you suppose any woman in the world was ever taken unawares? But—oh, Ned, our friendship has been so good and so pleasant! What a pity to spoil it! Don't you see how splendid it is that a young man and a young woman should be able to talk face to face as we have talked?"

"I don't know, Gladys. You see, can talk face to face with—well, the station-master." I can't imagine how that official came into the matter; but in he trotted, and set us both laughing. "That does not satisfy me in the least. I want my arms round you, and your head on my breast, and—oh, Gladys, I want—"

She had sprung from her chair, and she saw signs that I proposed to demonstrate some of my wants. You've spoiled everything, Ned," she said. "It's all so beautiful and natural until this kind of thing comes in! It is such a pity! Why can't you control yourself?"

"I didn't invent it," I pleaded. "It's nature. It's love."

"Well, perhaps it both love, it may be different. I have never felt—"

"But you must—you, with your beauty, with your soul! Oh, Gladys, you were made for love! You must love!"

"One must wait till it comes."

"But why can't you love me, Gladys? Is it my appearance, or what?"

She did unbend a little. She put forward a hand—such a gracious, stooping attitude it was—and she pressed back my head. Then she looked into my upturned face with a very wistful smile.

"No, it isn't that," she said at last. "You're not a conceited boy by nature, and so I can safely tell you it is not that. It's deeper."

"My character?"

She nodded severely.

"What can I do to mend it? Do sit down and talk it over. No, really, I won't if you'll only sit down!"

She looked at me with a wondering distrust which was much more to my mind than her whole-hearted confidence. How primitive and bestial it looks when you put it down in black and white!—and perhaps after all it is only a feeling peculiar to myself. Anyhow, she sat down.

"I had to. If you want to write good copy, you must be where the things are."

"What a prosaic motive! It seems to take all the romance out of it. But, still, whatever your motive, I am glad that you went down to that mine." She gave me her hand; but with such sweetness loved, and how other women must have envied her! That's what I should like to be,—envied for my man."

"But you shouldn't do it merely to please me. You should do it because you can't help yourself, because it's natural to you, because the man in you is crying out for heroic expression. Now, when you described the Wigan coal explosion last month, could you not have gone down and helped those people, in spite of the choke-damp?"

"I did."

"You never said so."

"There was nothing worth bucking about."

"I didn't know." She looked at me with rather more interest.

"That was brave of you."

"I had to. If you want to write good copy, you must be where the things are."

"What a prosaic motive! It seems to take all the romance out of it. But, still, whatever your motive, I am glad that you went down to that mine." She gave me her hand; but with such sweetness

"I want my arms around you, and your head on my breast, and—oh, Gladys, I want—"

"Now tell me what's amiss with me?"

"I'm in love with somebody else," said she.

It was my turn to jump out of my chair.

"It's nobody in particular," she explained, laughing at the expression of my face; "only an ideal. I've never met the kind of man I mean."

"Tell me about him. What does he look like?"

"Oh, he might look very much like you."

"How dear of you to say that! Well, what is it that he does that I don't do? Just say the word—teetotal, vegetarian, aeronaut, theosophist, superman. I'll have a try at it, Gladys, if you will only give me an idea what would please you."

She laughed at the elasticity of my character. "Well, in the first place, I don't think my ideal would speak like that," said she.

"He would be a harder, sterner man, not so ready to adapt himself to a silly girl's whim. But, above all, he must be a man who could do, who could act, who could look death in the face and have no fear of him, a man of great deeds and strange experiences. It is never a man that I should love, but always the glories he had won; for they would be reflected upon me. Think of Richard Burton! When I read his wife's life of him I could so understand her love! And Lady Stanley! Did you ever read the wonderful last chapter of that book about her husband? These are the sort of men that a woman could worship with all her soul, and yet be the greater, not the less, on account of her love, honored by all the world as the inspirer of noble deeds."

She looked so beautiful in her enthusiasm that I nearly brought down the whole level of the interview. I gripped myself hard, and went on with the argument.

"We can't all be Stanleys and Burtons," said I; "besides, we don't get the chance,—at least, I never had the chance. If I did, I should try to take it."

"But chances are all around you. It is the mark of the kind of man I mean that he makes his own chances. You can't hold him back. I've never met him, and yet I seem to know him so well. There are herolisms all round us waiting to be done. It's for men to do them, and for women to reserve their love as a reward for such men. Look at that young Frenchman who went up last week in a balloon. It was blowing a gale of wind; but because he was announced to go he insisted on starting. The wind blew him fifteen hundred miles in twenty-four hours, and he fell in the middle of Russia. That was the kind of man I mean. Think of the woman as and dignity that I could only stoop and kiss it. "I dare say I am merely a foolish woman with a young girl's fancies. And yet it is so real with me, so entirely part of my very self, that I cannot help acting upon it. If I marry, I do want to marry a famous man!"

"Why should you not?" I cried. "It is women like you who brace men up. Give me a chance, and see if I will take it! Besides, as you say, men ought to make their own chances, and not wait until they are given. Look at Clive—just a clerk, and he conquered India! By George! I'll do something in the world yet!"

She laughed at my sudden Irish effervescence. "Why not?" she said. "You have everything a man could have—youth, health, strength, education, energy. I was sorry you spoke. And now I am glad—so glad—if it wakes these thoughts in you!"

"And if I do—"

Her dear hand rested like warm velvet upon my lips. "Not another word, Sir! You should have been at the office for evening duty half an hour ago; only I hadn't the heart to remind you. Some day, perhaps, when you have won your place in the world, we shall talk it over again."

And so it was that I found myself that foggy November evening pursuing the Camberwell train with my heart glowing within me, and with the eager determination that not another day should elapse before I should find some deed which was worthy of my lady. But who—who in all this wide world could ever have imagined the incredible shape which that deed was to take, or the strange steps by which I was led to the doing of it?

And, after all, this opening chapter will seem to the reader to have nothing to do with my narrative; and yet there would have been no narrative without it, for it is only when a man goes out into the world with the thought that there are herolisms all round him, and with the desire all alive in his heart to follow any which may come within sight of him, that he breaks away as I did from the life he knows, and ventures forth into the wonderful mystic twilight land where lie the great adventures and the great rewards. Be hold me, then, at the office of the Daily Gazette, on the staff of which I was a most insignificant unit, with the settled determination that very night, if possible, to find the quest which should be worthy of my Gladys! Was it hardness, was it selfishness, that she should ask me to risk my life for her own glorification? Such thoughts may come to middle age; but never to ardent three-and-twenty in the fever of his first love.

BUT Can All Be Best?

How can every boiler be the best boiler on earth? Ever heard a fellow who had boilers to sell admit anyone had one any better?

We don't claim the Burnham is the best on earth. But we do know, that its long fire travel makes a short coal bill.

There are about 10,000 new home owners each year, who like that short coal bill. Instead of swearing at the coal dealer they swear by their Burnham and the Cozy Comfort Heat it gives.

Send for booklet called Letters To and Fro. It's an eye opener on coal saving.

Atlantic N.C. doubled the life of these Ford users' brake bands. They say:

"During the past two years we have used considerable Atlantic N. C. Motor Oil in our Ford cars and have had ample opportunity to check up on its merits. We found that it not only eliminates the chatter so often found in this type of car, but we get practically twice the number of miles out of a set of bands that we got formerly."

You'll thumb your dictionary dog-eared for words to express your satisfaction with Atlantic N. C. Not only is it a splendid lubricant, but the way it stops brake-band chatter is almost miraculous. Simply drain the crankcase, refill with Atlantic N. C., and any chatter that may have developed instantly disappears. Use Atlantic N. C. regularly and it won't return while there's a wafer-thin strip of the lining left.

Keeping chatter out of your car keeps efficiency in. Makes your car last longer, cuts down repairs, and weaves a wreath of smiles about your countenance. Dealers and users everywhere are enthusiastic about Atlantic N. C. Sold by the quart and in 1 and 5 gallon cans.

ATLANTIC N.C. MOTOR OIL (non-chattering) for FORDS

Here's what some of the other Atlantic N. C. users are saying:

"We have a fleet of fifteen Fords. About a year and a half ago we were prevailed upon to try Atlantic N. C. We felt that in a week's time an improvement might be noticed; but to our surprise, the cars immediately started and stopped with the ease of a Packard. It certainly stopped the chatter. We waited 18 months to see if the bands were injured in any way, or if there were any other faults. There were none."

"Never used any other oil that worked so well as Atlantic N. C. And the upkeep expense is less."

"Purchased some Atlantic N. C. about four weeks ago, and my car is working better than ever before."

Rheumatism

"Good-bye old crutch!"

There is positively no longer any excuse for suffering the agonies of rheumatism! Especially in the autumn of your life, when the vital organs weaken, impurities multiply and linger in the muscles and joints, as never before. It is now, just now, when you cannot afford to guess. No day returns! Here is a joyous fact which can mean to you a fond farewell forever to all the miseries, the tortures, the body-twisting pains that you have suffered from the demon of rheumatism. It is a fact that rheumatism means "blood poverty." It is a fact with the increase of red-cells in your blood, impurities are destroyed. It is a fact that S.S.S. will help Nature build these red-blood-cells! S.S.S. is one of the most powerful blood cleansers in existence. Its results in thousands of rheumatic cases have been nothing short of amazing! The medicinal ingredients of S.S.S. are purely vegetable. This is very important to remember! What can be more inspiring, more wonderful than to see the shackles of pain released from your struggling body, swellings, lingering pains, stiffness of joints and muscles all disappear; your stomach made strong; your face pink with the old sweet-heart glow, your blood enriched and your cheeks more plump as they used to be. You can do it! Take S.S.S., the great destroyer of rheumatic impurities.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.
